Boston. Address. School ~treet

Orig. called Centry Hill Lane. Then changed to Latin School Street, due to the old Latin School which stood below where Kings Chapel now stands, later on Parker H^ouse site

Ref: Drake. OLD LANDMARKS chap. 1

Boston. Address. School Street

So named because Latin School for Boys stood here from 1634-1844; first on the back part of the King's Chapel site, and after 1748 on the Parker House site.

Boston. Address. School Street

Laid out in 1640 as a lane leading to Beacon Hill; was called Latin School Street soon after the school was established in 1635

AFRICAN BAPTIST CHURCH

Boston. Address. Smith Court

In late 18th freed slaves settled here. In 1806 they built the African Mtg House. When children of its parishioners were refused admission to public schools, a community school was founded in basement of the Mtg House. Later, in 1820 the parish bld the Abiel Smith School on cor. Smith Court & Joy. It served until public schools were integrated in 1855.

Boston. Address. 3 Smith Court

Blt. 1799 ir 1800 by 2 carpenter brothers Benajah Brigham and William Lancaster. At the time it was a wealthy neighborhood w/ Bulfinch's house for Harrison Gray Otis around the corner. From 1851-56 Cooper Nell, the ~~First~~ U.S. black to write a history of American blacks & the 1st black to hold a non-military position in federal service lived here. House declared Nat'l Landmark in 1976.

Late in 19th cent. house was expanded from its earlier Federal style south-facing farmhouse w/many windows. A 2-story addition added to each end of center block. Plumbing & electricity added in early 20th cent. In 1977 it was owned by M.I.T. professor Kenneth Kenniston.

ADDRESS. Somerset and Beacon Sts.

This originally was the site of the house of the Rev. James Allen (See: HOUSES).

Later, around 18¹⁵~~00~~, it was the site of several mansions among them that of David Hinkley (See: HOUSES)

This and an adjoining house was later made into the Somerset Club (See: ASSOCIATIONS).

In 1872, the Somerset Club moved and this was purchased by the Congregational Association (See: ASSOCIATIONS).
